

I am opposed to allowing electrical companies to provide broadband access to the Internet. Based on what I know, both Japan and the UK have found that Access BPL will interfere with critical communications channels. I truly would love the cheaper rates for broadband access that Access BPL would offer but I think the interference issues are more compelling as to not implementing the technology.